About This Game

When the kids at your high school start developing psychic powers, you and your friends must team up to stop the principal from taking over the world!

"Psy High" is an interactive teen supernatural mystery novel by Rebecca Slitt, where your choices control the story. It's entirely text-based—without graphics or sound effects—and fueled by the vast, unstoppable power of your imagination.

Play as male or female; gay, straight, or bi. Will you be a jock or a brain? Popular or ignored? Use your psychic powers to help others, or to take what you want. Win a coveted scholarship, star in the Drama Club play - or lose it all and spend your senior year in juvenile detention. How much are you willing to sacrifice to get ahead in the world?

Can you solve the case? Can you save the school? And most importantly, can you find a date to the prom?

- Solve mysteries in the classic teen-detective genre with a supernatural twist
- Find your place in the cutthroat high-school social scene: be an athlete, an actor, a brain, or a rebel

- Uncover the truth about your small town and its secrets
  - Instead of stopping the principal, why not steal his powers for yourself, or even join him in his plan for world domination?
  - Find your one true love, or more than one! (They never talked about love triangles in trigonometry!)

"Oh," Mom calls as you start up the stairs, "don't forget about the scholarship competitions!"

You can't really forget. Mom and Dad have been reminding you about them every day since junior year started. They're probably more excited about the Kingsport Scholar and Kingsport Athlete awards than you are—which you suppose you can't blame them for, considering how worried they are about money.

You climb the narrow stairs to your room and close the door. It's not a very big room, and it feels even smaller since you painted the walls black last year, but it's all yours.

How do you spend your evening?

- Doing my homework, of course. I'm thinking about that scholarship!
- Hanging out online. I've got Instagram and Snapchat and Tumblr and Vine and texts and all kinds of things to catch up on.
- Seeing how loud I can play my music before Mom or Dad starts banging on my door.
- Spying on people with my clairvoyance. I do it all the time.
- Trying to extend my psychic powers. Sometimes I can read people's thoughts.

You have to admit, Carl's not bad-looking—thick dark curly hair, sharp cheekbones, and tons of confidence.

You're too far away to hear what Carl is saying to Ryan, but you see Carl snap his fingers and a tiny burst of flame leap up.

Most of the teachers think Carl is just really good at hiding lighters and matches in his pockets, because no matter how many they confiscate, they always seem to catch him playing with fire.

You know better, of course. That's Carl's ability, and he plays it up as much as he can, using it to intimidate people and make them do what he wants.

Pretty scary, huh?

- Definitely scary! I'd hate to be on the wrong side of Carl's temper.
- Scary and wrong. I'd never use my ability to hurt people.
- Scary, and kind of sad. Carl's changed a lot since we were kids, and not in a good way.
- Not really. If someone has an ability like that, why not take advantage of it?
- Actually, it's pretty impressive.

You and Tyler sit down next to each other, and he stretches his arm across the back of the couch so it almost—but not quite!—brushes your shoulders. Your heart thumps harder just from getting that close.

"So you're a detective?" Tyler begins again.

As you turn your head, hoping to show Tyler your good side (that's what you're supposed to do, right? Like in photos), you catch a glimpse of someone out on the beach. Someone tall and pale, moving purposefully.

Ms. Clay.

This is what you've been waiting for! If you follow Ms. Clay, you can figure out what she's doing. But if you're seen leaving the party this early, your reputation will take a big hit—and even worse, you might lose your chance with Tyler!

What are you going to do?

- I'm going to leave. Finding out what Ms. Clay is doing is much more important than a party—more important than Tyler, even.
- I can do both! I'll keep talking to Tyler and follow Ms. Clay with my clairvoyance. It will be hard, but I want to try.
- I'll ask Alison to follow Ms. Clay so I can stay here. I know she will back me up.
